Forecast for Monday 01 Nov 2021

Weather: Severe gales with outbreaks of rain at first, persistent for at time during the morning. More persistent rain clearing to frequent showers and brighter intervals through the afternoon, although higher tops likely remaining shrouded in cloud. Cold, especially in brisk winds. Freezing levels falling close to the Yr Wyddfa/Snowdon summit, with sleet likely above 900m.

Chance of cloud free mountain/hill tops above 800m: 20% through the morning, best chances in east. Improving to 60% through the afternoon, and 80% towards midnight.

Visibility: Poor at first with rain, whilst low cloud obscures tops above 400m. Air clarity improving to be very good by the afternoon, and away from showers some wide-ranging views possible. However showers will limit this at times. Cloud will lift and break somewhat, but still obscure some tops above 800m, and occasionally those above 600m during showers.

Meteorologist's View

Gales at first will ease during the morning, but remaining cold with brisk winds and a notable chill, especially during rain or showers. Low cloud will lead to some difficult navigation at times. Waterproofs and warm layers essential.

Forecast for Tuesday 02 Nov 2021

Weather: Showers will continue overnight, mainly across western hills with eastern areas clearer and colder. Light winds will allow for the odd patch of valley mist or fog by dawn. A day of sunny spells and occasional showers follow. These could be heavy at times, with the best of the dry weather across the south and east.

Maximum wind: Westerly 10-15mph.

Chance of cloud free mountain/hill tops above 800m: 80%.

Visibility: Very good visibility away from showers, with distant hills visible. Showers will limit views at times, most frequently across northern hills. Scattered cloud will also obscure some summits above 800m

Temperature: Valleys: Plus 1 Celsius rising to Plus 9 Celsius.
At 800m: Plus 1 Celsius rising to Plus 3 Celsius.
Freezing level: Just above the summits.
